Time to say good-bye :-)

Time to say good-bye :-)

I'll keep this one short and simple: I don't want to, but I have to go back home. Today I officially checked out of UTS Housing. I will pack my stuff tomorrow and will head to the Airport the day afterwards around noon. My flight from Sydney to London Heathrow has the flightnumber BA016 and then I'll fly with BA696 to Vienna where I should arrive about 11 o'clockish.

All this feels very strange, sometimes I just want to be back home, then I am depressed to go back home... very strange.... the good thing is, that I am not the only one feeling like this so I will catch up with all my friends in Vienna who feel the same way. And if that does not help I will just visit my new family all over Europe - god bless discount airlines! As you may have noticed I had the best time in New Zealand because found I some really nice people there. Although it was a hard thing to say good-bye (Sue's song does not help, does it folks?!), it also means that as soon as I am back in Europe I can visit them much easily. Therefore, lets refill the savings account :)

Take care,

Andi
